The maps illustrate the development of Ryehath village between 1990 and 2015, highlighting significant changes in its infrastructure.

One of the most notable changes is the conversion of farmland into residential areas, providing housing for the growing population. The forest on the west side of the village was also replaced with a residential zone, connected to the rest of the village by a newly constructed road that leads to a bridge, allowing easier access across the river.

Another major development is the construction of the bridge, which eliminated the need for boats to cross the river. This improvement not only saves time but also makes the village more accessible for businesses and residents alike.

Additionally, the local shops were upgraded to a supermarket, offering a wider variety of products and discounts. The introduction of a post office further improved communication and accessibility, enhancing the village's connectivity to surrounding areas.

Answer:

The debate over the effectiveness of classroom education versus distance education has become increasingly relevant in the digital age.

Comment[tanya prashar3]: No thesis or outline shared

Classroom education provides broader exposure and follows a more traditional approach to learning. Students can interact directly with teachers, ask questions and receive immediate clarification. This real-time feedback makes the learning experience more engaging. Additionally, face-to-face communication with peers fosters a collaborative learning environment, making it more enjoyable. The social aspect of classroom learning also helps in developing interpersonal skills.

Comment[tanya prashar5]: You can add one example here

In the case of distance learning the learning would be done virtually and there is no real interaction between the teacher and the student, but the advantage of this type of learning is that the whole learning process becomes more flexible. Learners can attend classes from anywhere and at any time, which is beneficial for those with tight schedules or other commitments., for people who have no time to attend classess can opt for this virtual style learning.

Comment[tanya prashar6]: interaction

Comment[tanya prashar7]: Learning process

In my case I have experienced both distance and classroom education during the 2019 pandemic, where I found myself loosing interst in the classes, and often skipping them. Staring at a screen for long periods felt exhausting, and the lack of interaction with peers or teachers made the learning experience less engaging.

Comment[tanya prashar8]: Refer to student manual for structure of essay

In conclusion, both classroom and distance learning have their advantages and drawbacks. Classroom education is more engaging and interactive, while distance learning offers flexibility and convenience. It is important to have both options available so that students can choose the learning style that best suits their needs and circumstances.
